1. Final Delphi rounds for the next five PI/ECOTSS

The NNR2022 Committee continued the discussions from our last Committee meeting and adjustments were made to the list of PI/ECOTSS that will be included in the final Delphi round(s) for prioritization of the last five topics for systematic reviews. Adjustments are made based on the public call for nomination of topics and the list of already existing qualified systematic reviews. In addition, outcomes of substantial public health concerns were discussed. The final round(s) of prioritization will not be initiated until late April as these discussions will continue throughout our next Committee meetings. The top five priorities will be announced at our official webpage within the next weeks.

2. Sustainability

The NNR2022 Committee have now signed a contract with Chatham House in London, which will take the lead in writing the background papers that will constitute the basis for integration of environmental sustainability into the food based dietary guidelines. Tim Benton and Helen Harwatt from Chatham House will take the lead in these papers together with representatives from the NNR2022 Committee and several Nordic experts (names and affiliations will be announced when all Nordic experts are established). The NNR Committee is planning for a webinar on April 22 where the aim is to align initiatives on sustainability in the EU and Nordics. Invitation and program will be announced at our official webpage and distributed by our email-list. The program is expected to be ready by the end of March/primo April.
