1. Presentation of the project by Rune Blomhoff (project leader). Status of the work.

The main focus of the work has been on establishing the principles and methodology for developing the sixth edition of NNR. The International Scientific Advisory Group is now selected. Further the chapters on methodology and principles are soon to be finished and will be published in the Food & Nutrition Research during the first quartile of 2020. The process for nominating topics for systematic reviews have started, and the Committee members are working on scoping reviews for each topic to ensure full transparency regarding methods. Further the Committee is in the process of nominating chapter experts and a NNR2022-Systematic Review Center based on public calls.

In January, the Committee will arrange a workshop on sustainability to discuss how to integrate this topic in DRVs and FBDGs. Several central international and Nordic scientific experts will be invited to discuss this topic.

2. Budget and economy

The final changes in the budget for NNR2022 was presented for the Steering Group.

3. Conflict of interest forms

All member in the Working Group have submitted the forms for declaration of interest.

4. Next meeting

The next meeting will be held in Oslo in March 2020. There will also be a meeting in Helsinki in June.
