1. Presentation of the project by Rune Blomhoff (project leader)

The project leader presented what the NNR2022 Committee have accomplished since the last status report in March 2022.

The process for developing dietary reference values (DRVs) and food based dietary guidelines (FBDGs) was presented. The chapter authors are responsible for conducting the scientific health-based evidence for setting the DRVs and FBDGs. Health related background papers will be integrated, where relevant. The NNR2022 Committee serves as "editors" of the chapter. All chapter authors will be stated clearly in each chapter. The NNR Committee decided early fall that sustainability aspects will not be included in the health based nutrient and food group chapters. However, sustainability aspects will be integrated in the summary chapter, where the final DRVs and FBDGs are set. The NNR2022 Committee is responsible for setting the final DRVs and FBDGs. The DRVs and FBDGs will be stated in the summary report, that will also include sustainability aspects.
Status for all chapters was presented. At this time point, 11, out of 53, nutrient and food group chapters are announced for public consultation. There are no major delays on the nutrient and food group chapters.

The project leader presented suggestions for how the FBDGs should be formulated. It was suggested that the FBDGs should be flexible to make it easy for the national authorities to perform national adjustments as needed. This topic will be discussed further next year when the NNR projects starts the process for formulating the FBDGs. The NNR will be science advise for the national food and health authorities, and will not represent the final recommendations for each country.

2. Budget and economy for year 2023

The NNR2022 secretariat gave a status update on the budget and accounting for year 2021 and 2022. In addition, the budget for year 2023 was presented.

The NNR2022 project has applied for addition funding in relation to the extension of the project period with six months. The additional funding is related to wages, honorarium for experts involved, travel expenses and launching events/production of final report.

3. Communication plan and launch of final report

The NNR2022 project are developing a communication plan in collaboration with the Nordic Council of Ministers. The plan involves announcement of public consultations, webinars, newsletters etc. The tentative plan was presented to the Steering Committee.

The launch of the final NNR report will take place in Reykjavik on June 20. The launch will be an open webinar (details to be announced later). The final NNR report will be developed as an online version. In addition, a shorter summary report will most likely be available as a printed book.
